DIGESTS OF DUCK HUNTING RULES NOW AVAILABLE

A total of 2,200,000 copies of the Digest of 1961-62 Waterfowl Hunting Regulations has been sent to Post Offices for distribution to duck hunters when they buy their migratory bird hunting stamps this fall, it was announced today by the Department of the Interior.

The digests list by flyways and by States the seasons and bag limits for hunting ducks, geese and coots this fall and winter. There is also a summary of the basic regulations governing waterfowl hunting practices and a listing of the shooting hours, the special protection given some species, and additional bag limits for certain others.

This is the first time that digests of the hunting regulations have been made available to hunters at Post Offices where they purchase their duck stamps. Last year, the new digests were developed and distribution was made through Fish and Wildlife Service offices. This year, in cooperation with the Post Office Department, arrangements were made to distribute these digests when the stamps were sold. Copies are now available in all post Offices selling duck stamps.
